3. DUE on Friday, 2/13 class

- In this play the argument of the parents causes their children to suffer. Can you think of a time when members of your family or another family that you know have been involved in a dispute that adversely affected the lives of the children?
- Discuss the role of fate in your life. Do you think that fate or a predetermined path accounts for the life you lead? If it does not, please discuss what guides your life.

Reflective Writing:

Reflection is an exploration and an explanation of events – not just a description of them. Do not just summarize!

An example of how to structure your reflective paragraph:

Answer:	Use wording from the prompt to state what your writing will explain/examine.
Back it up with your interpretation, explanation and/or /analysis:	Questions to consider: <ul style="list-style-type: none">● What is most important / interesting / useful / relevant about the object, event or idea?● How can it be explained with examples, connections , facts, theory?● How can this be different or similar for you or others?
Conclude:	How does this impact you? How does it inform future decisions/event?
